5785: Transforming HaMelekh/ The King/ The Sovereign

As I write this, we are just two weeks away from the new moon, the new month, and the new year of 5785.

In case the past couple of years weren't enough to really shake things up for the world, and for us as Jews due to the shooting in Pittsburgh, Covid, and the insurrection on January 6, Hamas' attack on Israel last October 7 has shaken Jews across the world at unprecedented levels.

In case there wasn't enough polarization or divisiveness between friends and within families and communities, we have all too many opportunities to feel new levels of pain, vulnerability, hopelessness, and powerlessness.

That is where Rosh Hashanah comes in, replete with various challenges and opportunities around how we relate not only to power, but also to the theme of ultimate power, "King".

For many of us, however, the idea of "God as King" that is part of our regular liturgy, and even more so a part of the High Holy Day liturgy, leads to a sense of alienation from Judaism. In rejecting the idea that there is a king who controls us, and that we are merely subjects and peons, powerless on our own, many of us have also rejected our Jewish prayers as a path toward transformation. How understandable!

Where does that leave us, then- powerless?

Or perhaps we want to choose true power, and decide to lean into an increased awareness of the our choices and the actions we regularly take. Judaism tells us that we have free will. And in our sacred story about Passover, we also encounter the confusing verses about God hardening Pharaoh's heart. As we can look around at some of the world leaders today, perhaps we can see that there are a number who have been and are acting very much like that ancient Pharaoh, who was trapped by his hardened heart, and ultimately brought relentless destruction on everyone.

When we look honestly at ourselves, we may find that there are places in our lives where we are actually trapped at some level by fears, desires, experiences from our lives and culture that have hurt us, and kept us in our smallness.

This year, I invite you to explore new ways of becoming radically sovereign, not in the way of the Lone Ranger, but rather in the way of claiming HaMelekh/ the King, and the opportunity to become ever more sovereign over the kingdom of YOU. I will explore this topic more on Rosh Hashanah. Please share your reflections with me!

With prayers for a good, sweet year filled with deep and radical self-sovereignty,

Rabbi Daria

USER'S GUIDE TO THE MAHZOR PRAYER BOOK

By Emeritus Rabbi Gary S. Fink

What is a Mahzor?

The High Holy Days prayerbook is called a Mahzor. It is an anthology of Biblical texts, meditations and commentary, poetry and prose that spans four thousand years. It is meant to stimulate and guide your prayer.

The prayerbook is an important link to the feelings, hopes and experience of our ancestors. It also contains thoughts and writings which reflect the perspectives of our contemporary Jewish world.

On Contemplation, Reflection, and Meditation

Jewish prayer is both communal and individual. On Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur, we perform cheshbon ha-nefesh (introspection, or soul-searching) in a variety of ways. Some of you may find comfort, solidarity, and spiritual connection by participating along with the congregation, prayer by prayer, as we move through the order of service. But prayer is not confined to the words of the Mahzor. During the service you may want to take time to meditate or reflect on personal “prayer of the heart.” The themes contained in the Mahzor may bring your attention to an area of your life upon which you wish to reflect. We encourage you to pursue your individual thoughts and reflections, even as the congregation moves on to a different prayer. The prayer service can be especially fulfilling if we allow the mind and heart to lead us to meaningful areas of contemplation.

Some of you may wish to take time to read the commentaries on the lower half of each page. These commentaries provide guidance regarding the history and themes of the Hebrew prayers and often suggest ways to use the prayers as meditations.

Ultimately, prayer is a skill that needs to be developed and practiced in order for us to feel its full effect and receive its full benefit.

Active Prayer

Prayer is a participatory activity. It is not a passive experience. We gain the most when we invest ourselves in our prayer, or when we join our voices with those around us.

Oseh Shalom is a congregation that sings. The power of prayer can be felt most keenly when we sing together. The cantor's primary role is to lead us in song and musical prayer, not to perform for us — so follow the lead, raise your voice aloud and catch the spirit!

If you do not read Hebrew, please try to use the phonetic transliteration provided in the Mahzor. The sound of Hebrew prayer has power even for those who do not understand this ancient, sacred language.

On the Transliteration

A phonetic transliteration is provided for most Hebrew prayers that we sing. It allows everyone to participate in the singing of Hebrew prayer.

Please note that sometimes the letter “h” has a dot or line underneath.

This is the symbol for the guttural sound that we say in the word,

“L'chayim.” In some books, this sound may be rendered with a “ch.”

Most Hebrew words are accented on the last syllable. In some cases, however, the next-to-last syllable contains the accent. In our prayerbook, the next-to-last syllable is underlined whenever it is accented. If a transliterated word contains no underlining, the last syllable is accented.

You will find a more complete explanation of transliteration usage on pages xxiv-xxv in the prayerbook.

On Davening

Davening is an ancient style of worship. When we daven, we read aloud, but individually, at our own pace. You may daven in Hebrew or in English, whichever you prefer. It takes some practice to read aloud without being concerned with the reading of those around us. When the congregation davens, our voices produce a communal chant that serves as background to our individual prayer.

Footers

The bottom of the right-hand page usually indicates the service with which the prayer is associated. For example:

“Birchot Hashachar / Morning Blessings” and “Pesukei Dezimra / Verses of Praise” contain introductory prayers for the Morning Service on both Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur.

Maariv is the Evening Service,

Shacharit is the Morning Service,

Musaf is an additional portion of the Morning Service,

Mincha is the Afternoon Service, and Neila is the service for the conclusion of Yom Kippur.

On the left hand page, the text usually indicates the name of the prayer, and sometimes also indicates the section of the service.

ORDER OF SERVICE FOR ROSH HASHANAH

Kabbalat Hashanah p.23-58 (evening)

The introductory section of the Rosh Hashanah Evening service is Kabbalat Hashanah — Welcoming the Year. It contains poetry, psalms and song to prepare our spirits to enter the New Year liturgy.

Birchot Hashachar p.140 – 192 (morning)

The first introductory part of the Rosh Hashanah Morning service is Birchot Hashachar — Blessings of the Mornings. The prayers of the Birchot Hashachar express thanksgiving for the blessings we have and for the opportunity that each new day presents to bring tikkun/healing to the world

Pesukei Dezimra p. 194 – 276 (morning)

The second introductory part of the Rosh Hashanah Morning service is Pesukei Dezimra — Verses of Song. These prayers are mostly psalms and other Hebrew poems which express thanksgiving for the blessings in life and ask God to help us meet and overcome challenges and difficult times.

Shema U'virchoteha (Shema and blessings)

Maariv (evening) p.62-102 Shacharit (morning) p.278 – 322

In this section of the service, there are two prayers before the Shema itself, which is the central affirmation of Jewish prayer:

The theme of the first prayer is Yotzer Or — the light of creation and renewal (p.62 or 280-298).

The theme of the second prayer is Torah Or — the light of Torah and learning (p.72 or 300-302).

The main focus of Shema U'virchoteha is the Shema itself (p.76 or 312) — one simple but profound sentence which affirms God's oneness. The theme of the Shema prayer is Or Hashem — the light of God.

The next paragraph (V'ahavta, p. 76 or 304) directs us to commit wholeheartedly to God's ways, and to teach God's pathways to our children.

The following paragraphs contain Biblical passages which remind us to adhere to divine pathways. The final paragraph after the Shema prescribes the wearing of a fringed garment (tallit or prayer shawl) as a reminder of our ethical obligations in the world. (p.77-84 or 305-312)

After the Shema paragraphs, we recite one prayer during Shacharit (morning service) and two prayers in Maariv (evening service):

The theme of the first prayer after the Shema paragraphs is Or Tikkun — the light of tikkun - healing and repair of our world (p.90 or 314-318).

In the Maariv (Evening) Service, an additional prayer is added to Shema U'virchoteha: Or Shalom — the light of peace (p.92).

Amidah Maariv p.103–126; Shacharit p.324-332, 364-382; Musaf p.324-372, 668-674

The Amidah consists of seven prayers (referred to as blessings), recited individually. The number and theme of each prayer is indicated in the text. Sometimes we chant the first three prayers aloud, then continue individually. We may chant other excerpts from the Amidah as well. In the Rosh Hashanah Musaf (Additional) service, the Amidah contains special New Year prayers which are inserted among the seven blessings.

Traditionally, we read each of the Amidah prayers, many of which were written more than 1500 years ago. The seven blessings begin with Avot, a prayer of thanksgiving for the lives of our ancestors, then affirm God's creative power. The blessings conclude with a prayer for peace.

The Amidah can also serve as directed meditation. We can use the theme of each blessing, or a part of each prayer, as a guide for personal meditation.

The Amidah is also a time for individual reflection and “unguided” meditation.

During the Amidah, we pray as a community, but express our prayers in individual ways. For example, the Amidah blessings are written in the first person plural — the prayers are read as “we...” rather than “I...”

Torah Service p.464-606

In Judaism, study is as important as prayer. The reading of Torah provides a link with the world of our ancestors, and gives us an opportunity to draw Divine light from words of our tradition. The reading of Torah is followed by a Haftarah — a selection from one of the Prophetic books of the Hebrew Bible.

As you follow the Scriptural readings, please refer to the commentaries contained in the Mahzor for a wide range of ideas, lessons and explanations drawn from the texts.

Shofar Service p.585-592

The shofar performs many functions. It is an ancient call to assembly and worship. It is a wake-up call that stirs the conscience. And it represents a call for personal liberation and freedom from oppressive bonds.

Malchuyot, Zichronot, and Shofarot p.612-666

Three special additions to the Rosh Hashanah service are inserted into the Musaf Amidah. Malchuyot contains prayers which reflect awe and humility as we acknowledge God as a “Higher Power” in the universe. Zichronot calls us and the Divine Presence to remembrance of times past. And Shofarot focuses on the sound of the shofar as a call to repentance and tikkun (healing of the world).

Concluding Prayers p.1196-1226

The Maariv service begins its conclusion with prayers whose theme is observance of Shabbat (p.132-137).

The concluding prayers include Aleinu, which expresses the uniqueness of Judaism and hope for a world of oneness, the Mourner’s Kaddish, and closing songs.

Guide to Greetings

Please note the Guide to Greetings on page 1230, which outlines the appropriate Hebrew greeting for the Holy Days.

ORDER OF SERVICE FOR YOM KIPPUR

Kol Nidrei (evening) p. 692

The Kol Nidrei prayer brings our attention to the previous year. It begins the process of hitbonenut (introspection), which characterizes the spirit of Yom Kippur. The Kol Nidrei service is the only evening service during which we wear a tallit.

Birchot Hashachar (morning) p. 140 - 192

The introductory part of the Yom Kippur Morning service begins with Birchot Hashachar — Blessings of the Mornings. The prayers of the Birchot Hashachar express thanksgiving for the blessings we have and for the opportunity that each new day presents to bring tikkun to the world (to do good in the world).

Pesukei Dezimra (morning) p. 194 - 276

The next introductory part of the Yom Kippur Morning service is Pesukei Dezimra — Verses of Song. These prayers are mostly psalms and other Hebrew poems which express thanksgiving for the blessings in life and ask God to help us meet and overcome challenges and difficult times.

Shema U'virchoteha : (Shema and Blessings) Maariv (evening) p. 707-732; Shacharit (morning) p. 278 – 322

In this section of the service, there are two prayers before the Shema itself, which is the central affirmation of Jewish prayer:

The theme of the first prayer is Yotzer Or — the light of creation (p.710 or 280-298).

The theme of the second prayer is Torah Or — the light of Torah (p.712 or 300-302).

The main focus of Shema U'virchoteha is the Shema itself (p.714 or 304) — one simple but profound sentence which affirms God's oneness. The theme of the Shema prayer is Or Hashem — the light of God.

The next paragraph directs us to commit wholeheartedly to God's ways, and to teach God's pathways to our children.

The following paragraphs contain Biblical passages which remind us to adhere to God's pathways. The final paragraph after the Shema prescribes the wearing of a fringed garment (tallit or prayer shawl) as a reminder of our ethical obligations in the world. (p.715-722 or 305-312)

After the Shema paragraphs, we recite one prayer during Shacharit (morning service) and two prayers in Maariv (evening service):

The theme of the prayer after Shema is Or Tikkun — the light of healing our world (p.724-728 or 314-318).

In Maariv, an additional prayer is added whose theme is Or Shalom — the light of peace (p.730).

Amidah Maariv & Shacharit p. 740-774; Musaf p. 868-892; 948-980; 994-998

The Amidah consists of seven prayers (referred to as blessings), recited individually. The number and theme of each prayer is indicated in the text. Sometimes we chant the first three prayers aloud, and continue individually. We may chant other excerpts from the Amidah as well. In the Yom Kippur Musaf (Additional) service, the Amidah contains special prayers for forgiveness (Selichot, p. 948-952) which are inserted into the seven blessings.

Traditionally, we read each of the Amidah prayers, many of which were written more than 1500 years ago. The seven blessings begin with Avot, a prayer of thanksgiving for our lives of our ancestors, then affirm God's creative power. The blessings conclude with a prayer for peace.

The Amidah can also serve as directed meditation. We can use the theme of each blessing, or a part of each prayer as a guide for personal meditations.

The Amidah is also a time for individual reflection and "unguided" meditation.

During the Amidah, we pray as a community, but express our prayers in individual ways. The Amidah blessings are written in the first person plural — the prayers are read as "we..." rather than "I..."

Torah Service Shacharit (Morning) p.464-606 Mincha (Afternoon)
p.1038-1072

In Judaism, study is as important as prayer. The reading of Torah provides a link with the world of our ancestors, and gives us an opportunity to draw Divine light from words of our tradition. The reading of Torah is followed by a Haftarah — a selection from one of the Prophetic books of the Hebrew Bible.

As you follow the Scriptural readings, please refer to the commentaries contained in the Mahzor for a wide range of ideas, lessons and explanations drawn from the texts.

Yizkor Service p.1005-1034

We remember family members, friends, martyrs and others who have died throughout the years.

Avodah Service p.858-864; 894-896; 982-992

The three parts of the Avodah service are creatively interpreted and inserted into Musaf. The Avodah is a recollection of the ancient rite in which the sins of the people were symbolically cleansed.

Concluding Prayers p.1196-1226

The concluding prayers include Aleinu, which expresses the uniqueness of Judaism and hope for a world of oneness, the Mourner's Kaddish, and closing songs.

Mincha (Afternoon) & Neila (Yom Kippur Concluding) Service
p.1038-1229

The Mincha service begins with a martyrology (p.897-946), during which we remember those who gave their lives to the sanctification of God's name.

We end Yom Kippur with Havdallah, a ceremony that punctuates the end of a festival with hope for the future.

Blessed – Lui Collins

You have given me the melody as it poured forth from my heart
You have blessed me with the meter as it beat through my veins
As I walk with You and listen, Your words come to me
Oh blessed are we this day.

Chorus:

Hallelujah, Hallelujah
Hallelujah, Hallelujah
Hallelujah, Hallelujah, Hallelujah
Oh blessed are we this day.

Rain so gently falls to soak the earth, life bursts forth from the seed
Roots go stretching down to draw their strength from the soil
Upward grows the plant always reaching toward the hot, beating sun
Oh blessed are we this day.

Chorus

You grace us with Your wisdom, love bursts forth from our hearts
We plant our feet upon the earth to draw our strength
Open wide our arms reaching toward the sky, we're flooded with light
Oh blessed are we this day.

Chorus

May we walk within Your melody as it pours forth from our hearts
May we step within the meter as it beats through our veins
Open wide our ears and listening, hear Your words spoken clearly
Blessed are we this day.

Chorus

Be Holy, Hear the Whisper – Ellen Allard

Chorus

Ha-kadosh Baruch Hu (2x) (Translation: Blessed is the Holy One)

Be holy, hear the whisper, a quiet, gentle voice
Be holy, hear the whisper, that helps us make the choice
To be like G-d, to be like G-d.

Be holy, hear the whisper, present every day
Be holy, hear the whisper, it teaches us the way
To be like G-d, to be like G-d.

Chorus

Be holy, hear the whisper,
that guides each word and deed
Be holy, hear the whisper, reminding us we need
To be like G-d, to be like G-d.

Be holy, hear the whisper, the warmth of love's embrace
Be holy, hear the whisper, giving us the grace
To be like G-d, to be like G-d.

Chorus
